May 29, 1919 is a historic day in the annals of science. Astronomical observations recorded during the total solar eclipse on that day verified one of the predictions of ‘General Theory of Relativity’ – that, light bends in the vicinity of massive objects such as the Sun. We celebrate one hundred years of this landmark experiment carried out by a team of astronomers headed by Sir Arthur Eddington.

ALL ARE WELCOME